

Hog Fever, Episodes 1 - 5 (Full-Cast Audio Theater)

[Contained herein are Episodes 1 through 5] *Featuring Oscar nominee Terence Stamp and a full supporting cast *Adapted for the ears by Kevin Godley from Richard La Plantes memoir Hog Fever *Directed by Kevin Godley *Produced by Escargot Books *Sound design by Kevin Godley and Ivan Jackman *Original songs by Richard La Plante, Mark Ling, Daniel Ash, Billy Goodrum, and Kevin Godley *Original songs produced by Greg Penny and Kevin Godley *Incidental music written and produced by Kevin Godley and Ivan Jackman Part sickness, part cure, all midlife crisis. Midway between the satire of Spinal Tap and the pathos of American Beauty lies the schizophrenic state of mind known as Hog Fever. On the surface this is the story of a man, a motorcycle, and a teetering bank balance. But lurking beneath, occasionally visible like threads through faded denim, is the story of a man in search of freedom -- or at least one last stab at it. Motivated by the emasculating success of his British screenwriter wife and a love of Easy Rider and The Wild One, Robert Lourdes, a struggling American author on the cusp of forty, finds solace in the Harley-Davidson legend. Roberts last-ditch attempt to become part of his wives world ends in disaster when she blatantly co-opts his idea for a screenplay during a dinner party for a hideous Hollywood producer. The arrival of Gabriella, a beautiful Italian production assistant with a Harley of her own, stirs in Robert the first tremors of a long-dormant passion. Confused and lacking the confidence to shed the marital skin, he takes further refuge in shiny accessories, rallies, and bigger Harleys, culminating in a 1,700-mile pilgrimage to a major biker rally in Marbella, Spain. Hog Fever is Roberts comedy of errors as he embarks on a tattoo-and-testosterone-fueled quest to find himself.
