

Addiction by Prescription

In 1966, Joan Gadsbys four-year-old son died of a brain tumour. In response, her trusted family physician prescribed a chemical cocktail of tranquilizers, sleeping pills and anti-depressants - an act that initiated Gadsbys slow descent into an abyss of unrecognized addiction. Gadsby has emerged from her addiction to become a tireless advocate for systematic change and accountability in the area of prescribed sedative/hypnotic drugs. She has interviewed thousands - from consumers to doctors to pharmaceutical representatives and government officials as she conducted extensive international research - in her quest to expose the shocking truth of the depth and breadth of addiction by prescription which affects hundreds of thousands of men and women worldwide.
