

Australian Sketches Made on Tour (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Australian Sketches Made on Tour
An American humorist tells a story of a man who was lost at sea, and who swam and swam for an interminable time. He gives the most graphic account of the feelings of this man whilst battling against the waves, and then says: At that moment my friend touched something hard - it was the United States! Now, that belated American could not have had more difficulty in touching the United States than I and other passengers arriving last week in the good ship Victoria had in touching Australia. We had had a splendid passage all the way from London, and no illness whatever on board. The passengers did not leave the steamer at Aden, as there was no time; and the Victoria arrived at and left Colombo with a clean bill of health. After a run of ten days, we reached Albany.
