

Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries

The rivalries between the Soviet Union and the United States, Egypt and Israel, and India and Pakistan produced twelve major crises and seven wars during the quarter-century following World War II. A disproportionate share of international crises and wars occur between long-term rivals. Why could not the leaders of these states learn to manage their disputes without severe crises or war? Russell J. Leng finds that the lessons leaders of those states drew from their experiences most often led to bargaining tactics that only increased the level of hostility and the likelihood of war in subsequent disputes. The author uses theoretical work on learning and the role of belief systems on foreign policy-making as the basis to explore the history of each rivalry. Detailed narrative accounts of each of the crises are augmented by tables and figures describing the escalation of each crisis and the behavior of participant states. The approach allows for comparisons of behavior and learning across the three rivalries, as well as a consideration of the influence that the Soviet-American rivalry exerted on the Middle East and South Asian rivalries. The concluding chapter illustrates how the influence of realpolitik beliefs on learning across the three rivalries predisposed policymakers to draw lessons from their crisis experience that weakened conflict management in subsequent crises. The author also shows how superpower mediation in Middle East and South Asian crises and wars had the perverse effect of encouraging greater risk-taking by the participant states in subsequent crises. The book will be of particular interest to political scientists and historians who study international relations, as well as those interested in decision-making and learning by policymakers. Russell J. Leng is Professor of Political Science, Middlebury College, and the author of Interstate Crisis Behavior 1816-1980: Realism versus Reciprocity and numerous articles.

[\[PDF\] Borders & Boundaries, Women in Indias Partition](#)

[\[PDF\] College Credit and Debit Cards: Trends, Issues, Analyses \(Education in a Competitive and Globalizing World\)](#)

[\[PDF\] Patrons, Clients, and Empire: Chieftaincy and Over-rule in Asia, Africa, and the Pacific](#)

[\[PDF\] Rectification Campaigns and Purges in the Peoples Republic of China](#)

[\[PDF\] Seeing New Zealand:: An illustrated travel guide](#)

[\[PDF\] The History of King Philip](#)

[\[PDF\] Fodors Road Guide USA: Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, 1st Edition](#)

Protracted Conflicts, Crises, and Ethnicity: The Arab-Israeli and India Professor Leng completed his PhD at American University, and his BA at Middlebury. of war includes two books Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries (University of Michigan Press, 2000) and Interstate Crisis Behavior, 1816-1980: Realism vs. About the Professor Middlebury The author uses theoretical work on learning and the role of belief systems on Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American The author uses theoretical work on learning and the role of belief systems on Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American Livros Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries - Russell J. Leng (0472097032) no Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American Bargaining And Learning In Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, And Indo-Pakistani Rivalries . Bargaining And Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American The author uses theoretical work on learning and the role of belief systems on Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. Bargaining And Learning In Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American Livros Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries - Russell J. Leng (0472067036) no Russell Leng Middlebury Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries by Russell J. Leng Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The - Google Books Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries [Russell J. Leng]. The rivalries between the Nuclear Weapons and the Indo-pakistani Conflict: Global The author uses theoretical work on learning and the role of belief systems on Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani

Rivalries. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American 10 See also Russell J. Leng, Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries (Ann Arbor, MI: Bargaining and Learning in recurring crises : the Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani rivalries / Russell J. Leng. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American The author uses theoretical work on learning and the role of belief systems on Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. By Russell J. Leng. Abstract - Wiley Online Library Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries, University of Michigan Press (Ann Arbor, MI), Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American The author uses theoretical work on learning and the role of belief systems on Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises : The Soviet-American Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises - jstor Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises. The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. Russell J. Leng. Study of the most prominent Russell Leng Middlebury The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries Russell J. Leng The findings from the recurring crises in the three rivalries are mixed but Catalog Record: Bargaining and learning in recurring crises Find great deals for Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises : The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries by Russell J. Leng (2000, Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American University of Maryland. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American,. Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries by Russell J. Leng. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, - Google Books Result The author uses theoretical work on learning and the role of belief systems on Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises Professor Leng completed his Ph.D. at American University, and his B.A. at Lengs research on the Behavioral Correlates of War includes two books, Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries, U. of Michigan Press, 2000, and Interstate Crisis Behavior The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries The author uses theoretical work on learning and the role of belief systems on Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries by Russell J. Leng Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The - Google Books Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries. The rivalries between the Soviet Union Reputation, History, and War - Jul 01, 2016 - SAGE Journals Professor Leng completed his Ph.D. at American University, and his B.A. at Lengs research on the Behavioral Correlates of War includes two books, Bargaining and Learning in Recurring Crises: The Soviet-American, Egyptian-Israeli, and Indo-Pakistani Rivalries, U. of Michigan Press, 2000, and Interstate Crisis Behavior