

Being and Having - An Existentialist Diary

It is customary to count Marcel among the Big Four of contemporary existentialism, ranging him along with Sartre, Heidegger, and Jaspers. Marcel's Being and Having is not organized like a conventional philosophical treatise, however. Instead, it combines a metaphysical diary with a group of essays originally delivered as papers before definite audiences. The diary and the reflective conference are, indeed, the chief creative instruments used by Marcel in his philosophical investigations. In true existential fashion, the journal calls attention to the personal mode of philosophizing, replete with its false starts and fragmentary insights. The metaphysical diary shows us, in the concrete, what it means to be a Socratic mind and to engage in constant self-questioning and dialogue. -- Marcel's Being and Having is made up of two parts. Part one, entitled Being and Having, has two entries: I. A Metaphysical Diary II. Outlines of a Phenomenology of Having. Part two, entitled, Faith and Reality, has three entries: I. Some Remarks on the Irreligion of Today II. Some Thoughts on Faith III. Peter Wust on the Nature of Piety
