Excerpt from The Crimes of the Clergy, or the Pillars of Priest-Craft Shaken: With an Appendix Entitled the Scourge of Ireland; And an Account of the Enormous Rewards Received by the Clergy to Induce Them to Do Their Duty to God and Man With these sentiments we shall take leave of our readers. We have done all that we pledged ourselves to do; exposed the crimes of the vicious part of the clergy, and exalted the reputation of the Established Church. Whether it may have any good effect, time alone can develop. We relinquish the publication of this work at a period when it is called for in every part of the United Kingdoms; and when we have communications that would fill volumes; but we never wielded the scourge in malice, nor has revenge any place in our mind. We have suffered deeply from church oppression; or, rather we might say, from clerical rancour, and our person has been thrown into a dungeon. However, when these gentlemen see that we have the mercy to forgive them, they should know we have also the power to chastise them whenever we please. It was our intention to give a list of Pluralists; the list would occupy too much space, and can give no satisfaction to any of our readers. Suffice it, that there are on the church establishments of England eleven hundred men, who hold above four benefices each; and three thousand, who hold two and more.
