

Pavlovas to Popcorn

The Author Ruth Frost has kept a diary most of her life and PAVLOVAS TO POPCORN is her personal story as a war bride married to an American soldier in 1945 and her voyage to the United States along with over 300 hundred other wives, fiancées and their 106 children. In her unique style of writing, her personal flashbacks in her life will take you on a journey of familiar experiences in your own lives. Two days out to sea the ship hit the backlash of a Pacific tidal wave and they faced injuries and seasickness so badly that mothers had abandoned their babies. The ships Captain wanted nothing to do with his passengers. He had transported a previous cargo of war brides and they caused so much trouble fraternizing with the crew. No Australian red-blooded girl would want to be pigeonholed as a trouble maker without some kind of retaliation. They took care of it! On the lighter side, the girls adjusted to the yellow ropes, the MP patrols, salt water soap that wouldn't lather so, took a shower on deck in the rain and washed their clothes at the same time. There was enough talent to produce a show to equal a Hollywood extravaganza. The book has everything; pathos, drama, romance, rejection, entertaining talent and plenty of humor.
