

College Grants and Scholarships with the Minimum Amount of Eligibility Requirements

This is an updated January 2016 document. We have heard many people ask for a list of scholarships that have almost no eligibility requirements, so that just about any U.S citizen or legal resident can apply for those scholarships. Chapter two of this updated January 2016 document will provide a list of over 150 scholarships that are applicable for just about any U.S. citizen. Amazon allows you to get a free Look Inside at the first part of this ebook. Please scroll down through the introduction to see some of The List of over 150 scholarships presented in chapter two. Finding the scholarship is one step in the scholarship process. Chapter four gives advice on how to apply for scholarships. We provide more information at our website about grants, scholarships, and a variety of other education-related topics at <http://www.grantsscholarshipsandmore.org> . It is easier to edit some information about scholarships on our website than it is editing an ebook, on a frequent basis. This January 2016 update provides: A brief overview of the world of college grants and scholarships. A list of over 150 scholarships that almost any U.S. citizen can apply for. Some of the scholarships are available for international students and other specific groups such as women, students enrolled in trade schools, and those who want scholarships with NO essay requirement. More resources that can help you find more information about grants and scholarships. Advice on how to apply for scholarships that you find. This January 2016 ebook is an updated, revised edition of our original 2013 ebook. In just one year since the last update in 2015, a number of scholarships are no longer funded by their respective organizations and at least a few more links were changed by the organizations that continue to fund scholarships. This is TYPICAL when trying to find scholarships. There are organizations that consistently fund scholarships year after year and have done so for many, many years. However, there are a number of organizations that will fund a scholarship for just a year or two, and then the scholarship disappears. Addresses, eligibility requirements, and financial awards may change for many of the scholarships listed, but usually the name of the sponsoring agency and the name of the scholarship remains the same. The name of the sponsoring agency and the name of the scholarship can be searched by using Google to find the latest updates in case the URL changes. All the links work in this ebook as of January 2016. It is HIGHLY likely that a few of these links will not work after a few months. It is simply a fact of the world of scholarships and organizations that things change. We keep a list of scholarships at our website that are available for different groups such as diabetics, Hispanics, women, single mothers (parents), nurses, and those people who want scholarships that require NO essays. We have heard the demand for international scholarships and we are working on that list at our website. We have decided to add a web page that will list scholarships that are no longer active. Some of those scholarships may become active again in the future. Please visit <http://www.grantsscholarshipsandmore.org> for more information about scholarships and other college-related topics.
