

Life-Long Learning Through Vocational Education: The Path of the Snake

Stories are a powerful and compelling way to express beliefs, values, and wisdom. Life Long Learning through Vocational Education: The Path Of The Snake is about the authors experiences in vocational education, her personal guidance from extraordinary mentors and her insights into the diverse educational needs of children and adults. These personal experiences provide a framework for the authors opinions about learning, reaching competencies, developing responsibility, ethics training, leadership practices and making life choices. These stories should stimulate robust communication between children, parents, mentors, educators, school administrators, and legislators. Thoroughly grounded in the latest research and effective leadership models, Dr. Whatley also presents a well reasoned discussion of the shortcomings of many vocational education institutions and how they can improve their delivery of instruction and their service to students, She provides prescriptions for improvements in leadership practices, mentoring programs, parental obligations, citizen and legislative action, and discusses the implications for welfare reform. The author includes success stories of a number of students who were able to change their lives through vocational education and the advice of competent, caring mentors. Dr. Whatley stresses the importance of these mentors throughout her life, and urges all parents to take on this important role with their children. She sees a need in our world for exemplary mentors: guardian angels who can commit to fostering childrens wellbeing, to helping students make wise choices, and to continuing a tradition of noble service to others.
