

The Adventures of a Soldiers Wife: Ireland / England 1915-1928

The Adventures of a Soldiers Wife is the true fictionalised story of Sarah, an Irish Coleen who in 1915, fed up of the domestic drudgery that had enveloped her young life, embarked on an adventure that was to change the course of her life. Sarah volunteered for service in the Army where she remained until she was demobbed in 1919. Then she met a young veteran of the war, Jack, a Sergeant who under age volunteered in 1914 for service on the Western Front. They walked out together until Jack eventually proposed to Sarah during the Irish Troubles of the early Twenties. It became a period of uncertainty as their forthcoming marriage was almost a disaster but marry they did. Soon after to be separated Jack to the fighting in Dublin and, along with all the other married Army wives, Sarah with a two month old baby was posted to Aldershot England. Unfortunately due to Jacks age they were not entitled to married quarters, so Sarah becomes a Squatter until she was discovered and evicted onto the square. Jack, a dedicated soldier, resolves the problem, but subsequently with his postings to different places, Sarah (then with more babies) followed. On their nine postings, each one provided its own problems revolving around their accommodation, until after seven years Jack was posted to India for five years. This became a fraught situation for Sarah. Fearful of what kind of life she might encounter in such a drastic place as India, she did not want to go. But go she did. Embarking on a troopship, they left the shores of England on the next leg of their adventure.
