

Darkest to Dawn: Truth is my Compass, and Wisdom my Helm

As the inhabitant of an imperial power, addicted to militarism and capitalism, it is my belief that no land or people, regardless of wealth or race, are safe. For such reason, silence, fear and invisibility should no longer be the norm, or sociopolitical dictate, for the benefactors of global exploitation citizens of the First World. It is through the process of acceptance that we, as individuals within the collective, are empowered to transcend and cultivate a sphere of transformation. The elevation and expansion of consciousness, synthesized by the disidentification and depersonalization of historically identity based trauma, will sustain the conservation of vital life energies. Of the many strands of oppression, the most acute form is that which is internalized. We must emancipate our self-perception from psychological colonization. We are cells within the body of a living being. We are self-aware and capable of working with divine energies. As the inhabitants of a degenerative society in the terminal stages of devolution, it is our existential imperative to invest all resources into creating the harmony and unity we desire.
