

Because I Said So: A Discussion on Parenting Styles and Achievement Gaps

Parents want their child to be happy, productive, and successful. Although, most parents wish for successful children, few know the parenting strategies method that provides an academic edge. After all, children do not come with a manual. This book is not a manual, but does provide information that provides parenting behaviors that promote high student achievement. This book investigates the influence parenting styles have on a child's social and academic success. Because I said so, also provides insight on parenting techniques that hinders academic success and contributes to academic achievement gaps.
