

Stray Cats and Other Loves: Growing up Jewish in Toronto

Evelyn Wolfe's story is unique in so many ways, and yet it is also very common so that anybody can relate to it. Schoolgirl, wife, mother, grandmother, community activist, world traveller and more. She had left her mark on her community, her city and the people around her. Evelyn Wolfe was born in Toronto in 1927 and her autobiography, Stray Cats & Other Loves, is a chronicle of a city from when it was a little more than a sleepy large town, through the war years and into the last two decades when Toronto became the communication and cultural centre of Canada. Evelyn Wolfe has always been able to connect to people, the famous and the less-than-famous. Among her closest friends were the poet, Irving Layton, Rabbi Stuart Rosenberg, Gideon Hausner, the world renowned Israeli jurist, cabinet minister and prosecutor of Adolf Eichmann, and Victor Kugler (the man who hid Anne Frank). She became a friend to so many people while her devotion to her family and community has endeared her to countless others. Stray Cats & Other Loves is full of adventure, the unexpected, the strange and unpredictable. It is a book written with immense courage, marked by its personal honesty, openness and candour. For those who know Evelyn Wolfe, this book will be treasured and enjoyed as a wonderful tribute to a person. And for those who do not know her, Stray Cats & Other Loves will move and affect you.
