

The Dice that are Hidden 1: Dialogue from the Ghetto 1

While centering on the self and entries into contests, The Dice that are Hidden is factual and not intended to entertain. The author was borne a Catholic but is not particularly public-spirited. After hospitalization in Calgary due to several strokes, he suffered the loss of friends in both the city and Pickering, where he spent most of his life. Census figures make the number of Italians in Calgary the lowest out of all the cities in Canada. The author remains interested in them because he came when he was young, left to study and work, and returned for his retirement. The stories of Professor Simon White and of the Facebook request Ninas Prayer are based on the real quandary of letting your heart rule over your mind. Inserts from the chocolate Baci Perugina were used liberally to point out the forced choices necessary to work in more than one language or cultural community. Who should writers write for? A language of expression is both a necessity and a choice, even among persons who are fluently multilingual. Ninas Prayer and most other adult writing like a Painful Loyalty are in English but two other inserts are in the language of Steves youth, Italian. While an earlier entry is in Italian, its topic is staying in not returning from an English speaking country.
